Stites elected president of construction organization's local chapter

Cookeville, Tenn. – Johnny Stites, CEO of J&S Construction Company in Cookeville, has been elected president of the Middle Tennessee branch of the Association of General Contractors.

The Association of General Contractors is an organization of qualified construction contractors and industry-related companies providing a full range of services satisfying the needs and concerns of its members. According to the organization's Web site, www.agc.org, the AGC is the nation's largest and oldest construction association.

"I'm very humbled to have been selected by my peers to serve in this role," said Stites, who has been involved with the family-run business for more than 35 years. "The AGC shares the same core values as J&S, including a commitment to skill, integrity and responsibility. These are very important principles in our industry, and I look forward to promoting them for both the AGC and J&S."

In addition to his position with the AGC, Stites also serves on the board of directors for his alma mater, Abilene Christian University in Abilene, Texas, and the board of trustees for the College of Business at Tennessee Tech University in Cookeville.

Celebrating its 50th anniversary, J&S Construction Company is a general contractor specializing in design/build projects. To learn more about the company's emergency services and commercial and residential construction divisions, call (931) 528-7475 or visit www.jsconstruction.com
