J&S Construction awarded contract for Lebanon church

Cookeville, Tenn. – J&S Construction Company Inc. of Cookeville has been awarded the construction contract for the Love One Another Church in Lebanon. The new facility will be a 13,600 square-foot addition and will have classroom and sanctuary space.

Love One Another Church recently sold its existing property to a commercial developer and is excited to begin work on its new home, which will be located on Highway 231 in Lebanon. The construction on the new property will begin within 60 days after permits are acquired, and the project schedule calls for a six-month construction timetable. The construction work will be completed by next summer.

Love One Another Church, J&S Construction and architect Chris Ross used the design/build delivery method on the project.

“Design/build construction is a cost-effective delivery method that allows the owner, contractor and architect to work as a team,” said Johnny Stites, CEO of J&S Construction Company. “The design/build delivery system saves considerable money on the design side of the project and provides a guaranteed cost on the construction side.”

Love One Another Church is the second church project J&S used the design/build method on in Wilson County this year. J&S is in the final stages of an 8,000 square-foot addition for Mt. Olivet Baptist Church in Mt. Juliet.

J&S Construction is a licensed design/build contractor offering a full range of services, including design/build, master planning, site evaluation and engineering. J&S Construction’s corporate offices are located in Cookeville and their Web site is www.jsconstruction.com.
